

Defaulting on the Dream: States Respond to America's Foreclosure Crisis

Delaware

AS IN NEIGHBORING MID-ATLANTIC STATES, home prices rose and opportunities for homeownership in Delaware grew significantly in the earlier part of this decade. One quarter of all loans made in 2005 and 2006 were subprime, and the state's challenges are expected to worsen. Projections show that one in 43 Delaware homeowners will experience foreclosures by the end of 2010 because of subprime loans—and 36 percent of all state homeowners could feel the ripple effects.

ASSESSMENT: Delaware has taken steps to respond to its foreclosure-related challenges. Programs including a fund to provide small emergency assistance loans and a refinancing plan should help homeowners who are struggling to pay their loans in the near term. The state has also begun to take advantage of National Foreclosure Mitigation Counseling grants to offer counseling to distressed homeowners.

The projections above are from the Center for Responsible Lending's subprime spillover research, updated in February 2008. These estimates focus on foreclosures resulting from subprime loans made to owner-occupants in 2005 and 2006.
